1. COMPTON PLEDGE

1.1 Summary

The Compton Pledge is officially supported by the Fund for Guaranteed Income, a registered 501c3 charity, and administered by the Compton Community Development Corporation. The scale of this program allows for the significant advancement of policy research. Results can inform key, open questions about what a guaranteed income could look like at the state and federal level; specifically, what amounts and frequencies of payments effectively provide urgent relief and longer-term stability. The Compton Pledge is co-designed by local and national organizations devoted to racial and economic justice. In a city where 1 of 5 residents live below the poverty line, 30% are Black, and 68% are Latino, the Pledge invests in the economic self-determination of a community disproportionately affected by the public health crisis of the COVID-19 pandemic as well as pervasive PTSD following decades of police brutality and poverty.

1.2 Guiding principles

- Prioritizing the agency of individuals: Guaranteed income is built on the premise that providing direct cash preserves the agency of individuals by removing paternalistic conditions or requirements around the transfer. Any additional services offered would be optional and requests to track outcomes would be minimal.
- Narrative building: Investing in narrative-building efforts to shift public perceptions away from welfare stereotypes, which studies have proven to be unambiguously harmful as well as factually inaccurate;
- Systems approach: Exploring ways to integrate with—and potentially strengthen—city-level mechanisms for enrollment and disbursement to communities which are excluded from welfare programs. Enhancing the movement-building efforts, capabilities, and campaigns of community-based organizations;
- Leading the research agenda: Contributing to the growing body of policy-relevant research on guaranteed income.

2. THE CASE FOR GUARANTEED INCOME IN COMPTON

2.1 Facts about Compton

For Compton's 95,000 residents, 30% of whom are Black and 68% of whom are Latino, structural inequalities in welfare provision have left more than 1 in 5 living below the poverty line.

The pandemic has left a further 1 in 5 Comptonians unemployed, and many are newly underemployed or face chronically low wages. Housing assistance is at capacity with waiting lists closed.

As protests for racial justice continued throughout the summer of 2020, the Movement for Black Lives published a national call to investigate and invest in guaranteed income policies and pilots, while also pushing for federal legislation outlined in the BREATHE Act, which incorporates an unconditional cash transfer. Among a slew of bold relief policies Mayor Brown has implemented over two terms in office, the Compton Pledge should be seen as Compton's local response to these calls for action.

Mayor Brown has committed to guaranteed income as an urgent tool for Compton residents' human dignity and economic justice. Since the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic, she secured an emergency cash relief program in partnership with GiveDirectly in June 2020.

2.2 Facts about Guaranteed Income

The positive impact of guaranteed income has been studied for decades, with evidence indicating that cash transfers are an effective anti-poverty measure with an array of welfare benefits. Empirical evidence also indicates that people keep their jobs and spend the extra money on groceries, utilities or other basic needs; those who work fewer hours largely invest that time in education, job training, or caring for children.

Between the global protests calling for the reinvestment in Black communities and the need to deliver emergency, cash-based COVID-relief, the case for guaranteed or universal basic income is at an unprecedented peak

3. THE TEAM

3.1 Leadership Team

The Compton Pledge is led by Mayor Aja Brown alongside the Fund for Guaranteed Income, the Jain Family Institute, and a Community Advisory Council of multiple organizations. Jamarah Hayner and Nika Soon-Shiong serve as Co-Directors of the Compton Pledge under Mayor Brown. The core partners are:

- Office of Mayor Aja Brown: Mayor Aja Brown was first elected as the youngest mayor in Compton's history in 2013. Since then, her 'New Vision for Compton' revitalization strategy has shifted Compton's trajectory, reducing unemployment, violent crime, attracted record levels of new investment - small and large businesses, grocery stores, housing, arts + culture, green development, health and wellness providers, which has garnered national recognition for her advocacy for youth, women's rights, and socio-economic advancement.
- Fund for Guaranteed Income: F4GI is a registered public charity launched in August 2020 to facilitate pilots in multiple cities, beginning with efforts to raise funds for and launch the Compton Pledge. F4GI seeks to create a society characterized by economic equity which grants residents their rightful share of their nation's wealth. It will act as a steward and champion for guaranteed income, with a focus on racial justice at its core.
- Jain Family Institute (JFI): JFI is an applied research organization that leads the field in designing and evaluating guaranteed income programs. JFI consulted on the Stockton, CA SEED pilot, the Alaska Permanent Fund Dividend, the Chicago Resilient Families Task Force, and related policies in New York City, as well as a forthcoming pilot in Newark, NJ. JFI is leading an evaluation of a 42,000-person guaranteed income program in Maricá, Brazil, a keystone of the movement for a solidarity economy. JFI staff will support the Compton Pledge through research, editorial and policy expertise.
- Compton Pledge Community Advisory Board: Dozens of Compton organizations are formally involved in advising the design and implementation of the guaranteed income initiative. Some organizations represented on the council include: CHIRLA, One Fair Wage, My Brother's Keeper, Shields for Families, Neighborhood Housing Services, Color Compton, Sylvia Nunn Angels, Vecinos Unidos Por Compton, Compton YouthBuild, Compton Advocates, and Originals Nation.

3.2 Funders

So far, the Compton Pledge has raised upwards of $2.5 million in private donations and more in-kind support. All donations go to the Fund for Guaranteed Income (F4GI), led by Nika Soon-Shiong, with the vast majority channeled directly to the cash transfer recipients. The Jain Family Institute and the City of Compton have provided in-kind donations of staff capacity. The Compton Pledge's fundraising goal is $8.1 million.

3.3 Research

The primary design partner for the Compton Pledge is the Jain Family Institute (JFI), a nonpartisan applied social science research group in New York City that has advised guaranteed income pilot research and design internationally, including Stockton SEED and the Maricá Basic Income Study in Brazil. JFI and the Compton Pledge are convening independent evaluators to capture the data and stories that will emerge over the next two years of cash transfers in Compton. The Compton Pledge will help researchers understand the design of optimal guaranteed income policy.

The randomization of recipients and the variation in disbursement amounts and frequencies enable the researchers to protect the anonymity of participants while assessing what parameters produce the greatest overall welfare benefits. Empirical research indicates that all participants will benefit substantially from the cash transfer, and these pilot variations will allow researchers to understand how positive impacts can be maximized. Given the size of this initiative, these results will add to the knowledge base to inform a large-scale policy in Compton and nationally.

3.4 Policy

The Compton Pledge has formed a dedicated, cross-institutional working group of alternative asset managers, lawyers, economists, and policy experts exploring innovative municipal financing schemes to sustain a long-term guaranteed income. The best methods for sustainable financing are the subject of much study. The team is looking to leverage the tools of community development finance and monetary policy to develop concrete proposals for a progressively funded guaranteed income policy in the Compton.

4. FACTS ABOUT THE COMPTON PLEDGE

4.1 Recipients

Residents of Compton who receive cash will be randomly chosen from a pre-verified group of low-income Comptonians, working in collaboration with national and local community-based organizations which have built the infrastructure to deliver Covid-cash transfers to individuals who are excluded from welfare programs and formal financial institutions. These sources ensure the lowest burden of documentation on participants, with the aim of making the program inclusive and truly representative.

The random selection draws a cross-section of low-income populations, such as households with income less than 200% of the Supplemental Poverty Measure and those excluded from federal welfare programs. In particular, the Pledge aims to incorporate immigrants regardless of legal status, the formerly incarcerated, service workers denied a fair wage, and others who are often marginalized by existing benefit structures.

A social security number or ITIN is not required to receive a cash payment through the Compton Pledge; while ITINs or SSN will be used where available to confirm information from existing databases, residential addresses in Compton are the primary form of identifying information. In addition, by working directly with community based organizations that serve the undocumented, Compton Pledge aims to build trust in the program and ensure individuals can receive the benefit regardless of legal status.

4.2 Transfer amounts

The exact amounts received by each participant will vary, but each participant will receive at least several hundred dollars, with greater amounts to parents with multiple children. The frequency of distribution will also vary but participants will be informed at the outset about the timing of their expected payments so that they may plan accordingly.

4.3. Impact on welfare benefits

Participation in the guaranteed income initiative will not affect existing welfare benefits. To the extent possible, the Pledge will secure government waivers to ensure participants' continued access to existing benefits. Wherever a waiver does not apply, the Compton Pledge will use its 'Hold Harmless Fund' to support those who face financial losses from pilot participation.

4.4 Payment and benefits platform

One of the innovations of the Compton Pledge is an online payment platform that allows recipients to receive their payments in a variety of ways: through direct deposit, electronic transfers, and prepaid debit cards. The platform also provides no-cost banking and access to existing financial, legal, and counseling services. This feature will enable Compton and cities like it to both implement cash transfers and effectively connect constituents to local services, and non-predatory financial services in particular.

4.5 Timeline

Fundraising for the pilot has been underway since August 2020. The program is anticipated to begin in late 2020 and transfers will continue for two years. Every six months, preliminary findings will be made available as the Community Advisory Council weighs in on how to ensure the initiative best serves the community.

4.6 Relation to other initiatives

Mayor Aja Brown is among the founding members of the Mayors for a Guaranteed Income \(MGI\), and joins a growing list of 25 mayors advocating for guaranteed income pilots and policy. The Compton Pledge leadership and collaborators are keeping in close contact with other cities conducting pilots. Notably, the Compton Pledge is unique as the largest such initiative, for its core focus on racial justice, for its financial inclusion and payment platform, for its broad-based coalition of local and national activists, and finally, for its significant research implications.

5. QUOTES AND QUOTABLE MEDIA

5.1 Stories

While the Compton Pledge is the first dedicated cash transfer initiative in Compton, participants in GiveDirectly's emergency COVID-19 cash transfer program, Project 100+, included some Compton residents; their narratives give an early look at the effects we expect to see for residents across Compton. As they emerge, Compton Pledge will actively seek impact stories from trusted community-based organizations and pilot participants, while protecting participants who wish to remain anonymous.

We aim to invest in long-standing efforts by community leaders to elevate narratives that challenge persistent racial and economic inequality. We believe stories from Compton can vitally inform the conversation about guaranteed income locally and nationally.

Karen Savage, Compton My Brother's Keeper Lead: "The Compton Pledge is an invaluable economic commitment that will help deserving recipients actualize the American Dream."

Saru Jayaraman, One Fair Wage Founder: “One Fair Wage pledges to support Compton residents because we believe that service workers deserve much more—they deserve to be lifted from poverty into livable wage jobs! We recognize that the economic system we live in was broken and we are offering Compton residents emergency cash transfers and employment opportunities in our CA Worker Cooperative. Let's build our future together.”

Patrisse Cullors, Black Lives Matter Founder ““Guaranteed income is an urgent and necessary strategy for addressing the economic realities of racial injustice. I’m thrilled Mayor Brown and Compton are leading the way in this growing national movement.”
